

It would be unwise to implement a proposal that would limit or lessen Indiana's telephone privacy law protections. I no longer get tired of hearing the phone ring and wondering if it is something important, or just someone looking to sell me something. I used to get 7 - 12 phone calls per day. Now that I am on the privacy list, all phone calls are personal and worth answering. The Federal Government has no place aiding the rights of any business to invade homes unwantedly. I hope that common sense prevails over greed.
